Herman Miller to release new classroom furniture

GRAND RAPIDS, MI—Only recently developed from the West Michigan Office furniture manufacturer, Herman Miller, is a new line of college classroom furniture that meets the needs of the contemporary college student.

The furniture line includes more comfortable desks and a new instructor station. Desks are designed to better accommodate laptops or tablets for students to easily take notes or work on assignments. They are on wheels, allowing for quick reorganization for group work. The instructor station has better AV capability and three flat screen TVs that can be used to show slides, videos, and other media.

“I’m real excited,” said Brian Alexander, designer for Herman Miller and Brian Alexander Studio. “This is the first time we’ve done anything like this.”

Alexander has received awards for his art and designs from all over the United States. He works as a designer for Herman Miller, but he also owns his own design studio called Brian Alexander Studio.

With nearly 8,000 employees worldwide, Herman Miller lives by its mission: “Inspiring designs to help people do great things.”

“I think what we’re doing is unique,” said Alexander. “I mean, we’ve been open since 1905 and are still creating high-quality furniture.”

Other products sold by the company includes healthcare, home environments, and wall coverings for commercial and residential interiors. For more information about Herman Miller see hermanmiller.com.
